( July-October ).

"Nature's best show, an incomparable play of one of the Africa's seven wonders of the world " a life-changing experience." Each year, over two million wildebeest, zebra and other herbivores trek from the southern Serengeti to the lush green grasses of the Masai Mara. As the herds of wildebeest, zebras and gazelles with a fascinating quest for survival in which only the strong survive and the weak are left behind as prey for their lethal predators, blindly jump from riverbank ledges and into the Mara River lurking with over 2000 crocodiles. When the food supply dwindles in the Masai Mara plains and the rains move on, so do the herds.

During the migration period (July to September), millions of animals cross from the Serengeti in Tanzania. On rainy days, millions of individuals of animals enter the reserve, the most prominent of which is the wildebeest herd, which sometimes moves in herds of up to two million items, which make their way with tens of thousands of items of common zebras and paratheses of various kinds. In the Mara Masai you can find all the cat species that exist in Africa such as lions, tigers and cheetahs, which are considered the fastest animal in the world. Masai Mara sits at the northernmost point of the Serengeti ecosystem, and is home to hundreds of bird species and dozens of species of birds of prey, rhinos, herds of giraffes and elephants that range from thorny bushes, hyenas, tigers, and glorious maned lions looking for their prey. The highlight of the day is the visit to the Mara River that runs along the reserve. Here we will observe the "big show" of the herds crossing the river. This is the culmination of the journey. Inside the river, hundreds of crocodiles and hippos are waiting for herds to cross the river and other predatory animals waiting across the bank for the tired herds. Nakuru means "dust or place of dust" in the Maasai language. And it is close to the town of Nakuru. Established in 1961. It started small, encompassing only the famous lake and the surrounding mountainous surroundings, but has since been expanded to include a large part of the savannahs. Observed hundreds of types of birds living around the lake, observed in the famous flocks of flamingos, Lake Nakuru offers easy viewing of the wildlife of most large safari animals. Among the predators we will meet: lions, cheetahs and tigers, those that are seen much more often in recent times. There are also large-sized pythons in the dense woods that can often be seen crossing roads or dangling through trees. We will continue our drive back to the lodge for dinner and accommodation. ### Lake Nakuru National Park

An encounter with the greatest bird spectacle on earth."

A little about Lake Nakuru Park: Renowned ornithologist Roger Torrey Patterson described the lake as "an encounter with the greatest bird sight on earth." Nakuru Lake is Kenya's most popular national park and is a great destination for a safari trip. Black hills enclose a small lake along whose shores stretches a thick stripe painted pink. This is Lake Nakuru in Kenya, home to flamingos and thousands of cormorants, antelopes and impalas. What's the secret of magic? Soda! The lake itself is incredibly small, and at first glance it is surprising that it manages to sustain around it and within it such a diverse abundance of birds and animals, the answer to this is somewhat surprising - since Lake Nakuru is not an ordinary lake, it is a lake of soda. The lake sits in the heart of an area with extensive volcanic activity. Mount Kilimanjaro and Mount Kenya to the east of the rift, and Mount Elgon to its west. Lake Nakuru National Park is the only fenced park in Kenya and is home to conservation projects for many diverse mammals. A visit to the reserve will give you a stormy experience, meeting you with all the power and splendor of nature. At sunset drive back to the lodge for dinner and accommodation.
